

Proven Head Protection to Reduce Impact

Keep Your Head in the Game

SkullTec has created a line of protective gear that uses patented gel pad technology proven to disperse energy and lessen impact. Designed to be worn either under the helmet or on its own, providing the confidence to compete at any level.

“As our understanding of traumatic brain injury increases, so do the opportunities to design and implement better protective devices,” states Nicholas Theodore, MD, FACS. “The SkullTec ‘skullcap’ is one of these promising devices.”

An inspired Game Plan

In order to find a more effective way to protect our kids, we knew we needed to do the research. How could we more effectively protect our kids — and any athlete, for that matter — from harmful head injuries?

Together with top neurologists and head trauma and concussion specialists, SkullTec has gone above and beyond, researching the specific conditions of every sport where athletes are at risk, and identifying the right material and design for that sport. The result of our in-depth testing is our innovative gel product strategically placed in both a skull cap and a baseball hat to minimize the impact. Not only did we create something scientifically proven to protect better... we created something stylish.

Our in-depth testing showed up to 43% reduction of G-Forces on side and front impacts.

SkullTec has raised the game by providing unprecedented 360° protection. Our patented gel pads are strategically placed around the headband and along the top of the head, where impacts occur most. Lightweight, comfortable and flexible, the standard black is quite fashionable. Which means kids are going to wear it — perhaps even after the game is over.
